There is nothing but evil in it. Hence we are utthey punish more of the innocent than of blood or forfeiture, except during the lifetime of the convicted, are forbidden in our Constitution. If the Constitution imposed no restriction on the power to punish treason, still the reasons against confiscation acts; but it applies to all who are in arms his lance and bolster up his rafety sixty days after a proclamation by the President. Now, if men South were free, there might be some reason in that; but they are under a de facto Government, a military despotism; and what right has a Government to punish a man for treason if It does not protect him in his loyalty? Men South are driven into the army, and have no choice in the matter, they can't obey proclamations if they would. The application of such a law, therefore, is exceedingly unjust. It is well known that no State went out of the Union by the vote of her people. An armed organization silenced the loyal sentiment in Tennessce. We may deed. rail at a majority that allowed a minority to play the despot over the State; but men armed and organized can hold in terror any community unarmed and unorganized. Indeed, a measure so palpably unjust will always defeat itself. It will never be executed. We have said a Government can't punish disloyalty unless it can protect the loyal. We often hear that no loyal sentiment appears in many sections of the South which our armies pass through. We are not surprised at it. The citizen knows that any demonstrations on his part friendly to the Government will be watched Union; but the strongest that can operate upon the human heart to resist to the last extremity. We asked a Union man from Alabama if the people of that State would come back to the Union. His reply was, that we gave them no chance to come back; we offered them only the halter and confiscations. Such laws, then, only operate as scare-crows to scare men into the Confederate armies, whilst they don't reach the guilty at all; and hence they will not be sustained by the moral sense of mankind.

The Detroit Free Press, the able Democratic organ of Michigan, has a timely article suggesting the proper kind of an armestice. It proposes that political parties shall for a time snapend their hostilities, which only serve to irritate men and interfore with the great patriotic duty now devolving upon the country of enlistment. Every loyal citizen must feel now that this is the all.important duty. llonors, offices and emoluments must yield to the higher and more important duty of furnishing the means of sustaining the Government. All public meetings, all expenditures, all

THE BEAVER DAM AFFAIR. Yaukee cavalry had, on Sunday, made a descent upon the Central Railroad at Beaver Dam station, and that, owing to timely warning of the presence of the eneny, the Contral westward-bound train had, after reaching within a mile of the station, backed off and returned to this city.

We have since learned some of the par-ticulars of the raid. OPERATIONS ON THE RAPIDAN. From the Richmond Examiner, July 22.

We have advices from Madison and Orange countles to Friday night, the 19th inst. On Wednesday evening, the 18th, it inst. was rumored at Madison Courthouse tha in force. A much larger body of cavalry visited Orange Court House on Friday morning. They seem to have come upon this place very unexpectedly to the inhabitants. At the very moment they entered the village a gentleman, a fugitive from Madison, was struct the passage of the expected train.

> ARMIES EAST OF THE BLUE RIDGE. [From the Richmond Enquirer, July 22)

The Rockingham Register, of the 18th inst, states that the movements of the armies east of the Blue Ridge have again interposed with the regular transmission of the mails. We have had no mails from the east since last Monday morning. The reg-ular daily trains from Richmond to Staun-ton have been stopped for the present and for a few days, in order to transport our troops to the right place. The main body of the lankec army has been moving out of the valley into the counties lying east of the Ridge, and our army will probably desire to form their acquaintance. At all events, since it has been pretty definitely settled that we have men and means day morning. There seems to be no doubt enough at command to make quite "a respectable fight," the Confederates will not get out of the way should the Yankees come

The Rockingham Register of the 18th inst. reports that General Robertson is after the enemy with a "sharp stick" upon all proper occasions. In a little while his name and the movements of his troops will inspire as much terror in the ranks of the enemy as did the name and movements of the lamented Ashby. Gilmor, with four or five companies, and six squadrons of Federal cavalry. The Federals were charged upon by the brave and impetuous Captain Gilmor and company and driven through Luray, with the loss of several killed and wounded and the capture of eight prisoners with their arms and horses. After running through Luray the enemy was re-enforced, when Capt. Gilmon retired to the White House ford in good order, without losing a man. At this point Captain Gilmor was re-enforced, when he again made at the enemy, and was still pursuing them when last heard from, the enemy beating a rapid retreat through Tharnton's Gap, in the direction of Sperryville. THE SHELLING OF HAMILTON, NORTH CARO

> (From the Richmond Examiner, July 22.) One of our exchanges has a letter dated Hamilton, July 14, giving a detailed ac count of the shelling of that town by the Yankec gunboats on the 9th inst. It seems that the gunboats, in their progress up the river, were attacked by a body alry, who killed five and wounded eight of their men, three of the dead falling overboard into the river. Our cavalry continued to pursue and fire into them until they were within a mile of Hamilton, when the boats began to shell the town. They were, or pretended to be, under the impression that the attack on them had been made by the citizens of the place, and on reaching wharf they sent ashore a company of Hawkins' Zouaves, with two pieces of cannon, with instructions to destroy the town But, on some prominent citizens approach ing them under a flag of truce, and unde-ceiving them as to their assailants, the Zouaves were marched back to the boats taking with them an old cavalry horse, the only piece of public property in the place, which, it is said, kicked one of the Zonaver mortally during the return of the boats down the river. Several houses in the town were very much injured by the cnemy's shell, but no citizen was hurt

We understand that the smuggling trade between Baltimore and Richmond Is still quite brisk, a considerable quantity of goods having arrived here within the past few days. The parties engaged in this traffic exhibit a most patriotic disposition to relieve the necessities of the community by selling tea at sixteen dollars per pound coffee at two dollars and fifty cents, and everything else in proportion. The articles are retailed to the people at prices which may well be deemed fabulous, and the consequence is that every necessary of life is held at similar rates, the producers arguing that so long as they are made to pay so enormously for goods, they must make up the amount by putting on a starvation tariff upon vegetables, meats, fowls, butter, eggs and other market supplies. In the present state of affairs there is no apology for commercial Intercorrse with the country beyond the Potomac, even if it were not for the purpose of encouraging speculation. It is a positive injury to the community, and

They were exceedingly indignant and were very bitpropose and advocate such a policy. There is on this point another thing which is omewhat remarkable. Wherever you find the Abolition element most prevalent, you will be sure to find in that regiment the most negroes as servants and hangers-on, and they do not always choose negro men for such positions. But these are questions which are entirely by the way. They do not and should not now enter into the fresh men, and he is preparing to renew great question of government or no govern-Slavery and abolition have been used by bad men on both sides to promote and strife and trouble. How best to end the war, to restore the Government to its wonted vigor and peace-ful situation, is the great question. Can this end be accomplished by reason?
That has been fully tried and failed. Can it, by taking the sword in one hand and the clive branch in the other, and thus march through the enemy's country? This, I think, has failed so far. In fact, all the of much of their territory, and our prisfilled with men who have been aiding and abetting treason, still we are not much nearer the great end than we were six months ago. But I have a suggestion to make, and, as it costs nothing, you can use it or not, just as you please. It is this: Let our army, as it moves South, carry everybefore it that obstructs the accomplishment of the great end. Every their negroes, who will not agree in good faith to uphold, sustain and abide by the government, Its constitution and laws, be sent through our lines and kept there. There is where they rightly belong That is what they call their government, and I for one say let them share its fate. Objections may be urged to this-that we will force the men into their army who are now comparatively harmless. But a very hort stay here will do away with this objection. Every man who is able to bear arms is now in the army, and those who remain can do more harm in giving information to their guerrilla bands than double their number could in the rebel army. These sycophantic, whining rebels should be made to feel the burden of treason; they should have the experience of a good gov-ernment and a bad one; they should be made to ask and beg that they be reinstated in their former positions as citizens of the United States. Now they are left to batten and fatten on the necessities of our army, as we pass through country, enjoying from beneficence, luxuries and comforts they have not had for months. But let the po'icy be adopted that they are to be sent South, as you Kentuckians do their vicious negroes, and I armly believe they will be more docile, and much more ready to re-linquish their faith in treason; and is there not humanity in this treatment? We do not confine them; we exact no oath of them; we send them among their friends, and, in addition, I would say we should use all the property of such persons that may be for the sustenance of our army. This policy, if adopted at all, should be begun at the Ohio river. Kentucky would not then be ravaged by marauders and gnerrillas.

The effect of this policy would be most potent. The scarcity of many of the neces-saries of life in the South is apparent to every observer; and if these sneaking reb els, who are afraid to fight, but lurk back for the purpose of piloting guerrilla parties, should be congregated together, they wilt be made to feel the enormity of their crime. Thus, as they accumulate, will they teel the fullness of their iniquity and be more readily brought to their senses.

The force of this suggestion can not be fully appreciated by you who live where all the necessaries and luxuries of life can be bought at reasonable prices. In addition to what has been said, it is proper to make snother suggestion. The most complete tyranny in the world exists in this Southern Confederacy. There are a great many men who are at heart Union ien.
